New Restricted NRA Begins Its Duties

Washington, June 18.—(AP)—Amid undenied reports of more permanent legislation, the new and temporary NRA set quietly about its much-restricted duties Monday while a companion measure for continuing code standards in the performance of government contracts was assailed by organized business.

John C. Gall, associate counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, contended before the senate labor committee that an unconstitutional delegation of congressional power was involved in the measure advocated by President Roosevelt which would force an employer with a government contract to put all his workers on standards laid down by the chief executive.

"It would not represent a congressional determination of minimum wages and maximum hours to be observed in the performance of government contracts," he said, "but would represent a delegation of blanket authority to the president to determine in every instance what minimum wages and maximum hours the contractors should be required to observe."

The navy also objected, with procurement officials telling the committee the legislation might "interfere with a continuous flow of materials" for the fleet and occasion "serious delay" in getting under way 24 new warships.

Captain J. C. Jawne, of the navy construction and repair, and Captain E. H. Van Datten, navy purchasing officer were the witnesses.

Previously, Stanley Reed, solicitor general, had assured the committee the measure was flexible and necessarily must be so because it would be "impossible to impose the same requirement on each government contract."

$7,437 Received For Faulkner Schools

County Treasurer Neel Webb today received a warrant for $7,437, representing Faulkner county's share of the common school apportionment, made last week by the state board of education. The fund for this county has not yet been apportioned among the districts of the county.

The county relief board reported 40 per cent of the population of Eagle Pass, Tex., living on funds supplied by state relief this summer.

George McKeever

Francis McNeiley, 22-year-old Allerton, Ill., farm hand turned bandit-killer, is shown as he took the stand in court at Fulton, Mo., to testify against his former pal, George McKeever, 24, must, convicted bank robber, who faces the gallows on murder charges drawn against him in connection with the double slaying of Sheriff Roger Wilson and Charles Booth during a bank robbery at Columbia, Mo., on June 14, 1933.

Queen of Florida Festival

Laurana Lyon

When residents of Miami, Fla., turned out for the annual festival marking the height of the mango season, an event comparable to the peach and cherry season of the north, they paid tribute to Miss Laurana Lyon, queen of the affair.

Camp Halsey Again Under Quarantine

Camp Halsey near Centerville, coal conservation service camp, has been placed under quarantine for the second time within the past six weeks. Development of a case of scarlet fever and a case of diphtheria prompted officials to quarantine the camp. Spinal meningitis forced similar action early in May.

Helena Merchants Oppose Sales Levy

Helena, June 18.—(AP)—The Helena Retail Merchants Association voted today to follow any methods adopted by any other Arkansas towns in opposing the 2 per cent sales tax scheduled to become effective on a final supreme court order upholding its constitutionality.
